Guiding Principle:

Teton County to its residents is a community first and a resort second. If it is to remain as such, then our community's workforce must be able to live as well as work here. Social diversity defines our community, and the services and civic institutions to support our residents as well as sufficient housing that is affordable to our working middle class are essential to retain this sense of community.

Objectives:

Support a diverse social and economic population

- Ensure that adequate housing is available to sustain the needs of our resident workforce

Sustain social structure needed to support healthy communities

- Community services focused in centers
- Promote innovative techniques and approaches to foster civic involvement

Identify and preserve/enhance each community's unique character

- Physical form and design of development fit the scale and character of the community
